

Debbie Evans is a lifelong entrepreneur, corporate marketing professional and part-time blogger on a personal journey to inspire and empower others to an improved spiritual, physical and mental way of life.

Featured in Crain's NY Business News, as publisher of Connections in Black, a bi-monthly magazine in NYC, Debbie has a strong sense of community, which was the focus of her publication.

Her corporate experience include investment research for a large Wall Street firm, international corporate marketing with a Fortune 500 oil/gas behemoth and promotions marketing for a grocery giant.

Scratching her ever-present entrepreneurial itch, Debbie, along with her husband owned-operated a Class A contracting company in the Northern Virginia area where their design and construction impact is evident in houses throughout the area, stretching in Washington, DC.

A final move to the Carolinas birthed an accessories boutique/jazz lounge in Salisbury, NC and Debbie now makes her residence in the South Charlotte area where she enjoys sharing time with her husband, daughter and granddaughter.

As a wife, mother, daughter, grandmother, sister, aunt and friend, she is purposed to help others seeking a better life for themselves and their families with her current work as a Founding Member and Better Life Consultant for Sheago Cosmetics.
